Ryan Hempel, Speaker

Ryan Hempel spoke at the Treynor Optimist Club on November 14 and was introduced by his dad, Jerry. A 2013 Treynor grad, Ryan graduated in Mechanical Engineering from ISU in 2017. He stated that ISU has one of the largest Career Fairs in the nation and while standing in a long line to visit one company, another nearby company invited him to visit – Specialized Engineering Solutions (SES), Omaha. He accepted a student internship and continues to work there.

SES designs HVAC, electrical, sprinklers, telecommunications, and basically anything inside a building that you don't see. Most of their market deals with health care including the big players in Omaha – Methodist, CHI, and UNMC. They are also spreading out to schools, churches, and community centers.

When the pandemic started, Ryan stated they would work at the medical centers on weekends and 3-4 days of the week converting patient wings to handle covid patients. They design areas to have negative air pressure and not allow air to circulate to other areas.

They are putting technology into various health care buildings that will kill viruses through the HVAC system. He stated that in NE there are some schools picking up on the same thing.

Some buildings need tweaking – perhaps adding more vents which isn't always an easy solution.

Business has increased tremendously for their service, and it is anticipated that the business will triple in the upcoming year.

SES designs the plan and contractors bid to build. SES follows up to make sure everything is correct.

There was much discussion about ultraviolet rays (UV's). Businesses are increasingly asking for this. Designed into a building, it can take .5 sec to kill the virus.

Ryan doesn't recommend UV wands for personal use as they don't have high enough intensity. There are relatively low cost systems at this time that can be installed in home furnaces.

The business employs 90 employees with four total offices including headquarters in Omaha. Patrick Vorthmann, a 2013 Treynor grad, also works there.

Ryan enjoys his work and sees himself staying at Specialized Engineering Solutions for a career.
